The Trylon and Perisphere

The Trylon and Perisphere, trademarks of the World's Fair, which was chosen as the theme of this annual, are symbols of the "world of tomorrow." What will this world be like? What part will we seniors play in it?

Just as the Trylon points ever heavenward, just as the Perisphere symbolizes a whole, a complete thing—so let our lives be that.

We feel that our school, our teachers, our classmates, our parents—all have helped to prepare us for this "commencement" in the world of affairs and men—the "World of tomorrow." To them we say—thanks!

THE BEACON

ANNUAL OF CLASS OF 1939

VOL. XVI.

No. 2

Your World's Fair

This is the year of expositions and I hope many of you will get to see one. I saw one back about 1900 when they had one in the city of Omaha. I have forgotten what the excuse was for having it but I recall very well the fact that there were no drinking fountains. We were there in August and soon discovered that when you wanted a drink you looked around until you found a water-cooler hung up on a wall somewhere. Then you dropped a nickle in the slot which released the spigot so it would turn long enough to run out a cupful of water. The cup was chained to the cooler so it would be handy for everybody. Mother did not feel quite right about drinking after everybody west of the Mississippi, however, so she carried a glass in her handbag.

But the thing I remember most vividly about the water-coolers was that along about four o'clock in the afternoon, when you didn't know which hurt the most, your aching feet or your parched throat, and you found a water-cooler and got your glass out, and dropped your nickle in the slot, the thing would be empty; your nickle gone—no drink!

Of course, in those days people who spent money for such things as bottled drinks, ice-cream sodas, and other unhealthful libations were considered as either lost in sin or too profligate with their money to be loose without a keeper.

In fact many persons thought a place where you could not get a free drink of water was not a fit place to be, and said so, too.

Since those days I have found out that there are many places along the road where you can drop your nickle in—but no drink comes out. I can recognize most of these fake water-coolers now, but it has cost me many nickles, many nickles.

Go along to the Fair, my young friends, drop your nickles in, and try to remember the ones that brought you back at least a cool drink.

Sponsor's Message

•

Dear Graduates of June '39:

I like to think of this message to you as a little personal note from me to each one of you individually, and to think that from it you may gather some thought beneficial to the attaining of your future goal.

Now that you must go on into a new era of your life, it is for you to decide what you will do with your opportunities.

Be dauntless. Overcome obstacles instead of avoiding them, for thereby character is built. Respect others and practice tolerance. Look forward and upward, ever striving for the best. And though your task in life prove great or small, do it well or not at all. Bonne Chance!

Sincerely,

Alice Archibald

Dedication

To Clifford R. House, Jr., Journalism instructor and adviser to the Beacon newspaper and annual, we, the annual staff, dedicate this book.

From him we have learned much. Responsibility, for one thing. This annual is ours and what faults and virtues it has are ours. Originality, for another thing; we have tried to make this annual a bit different from other annuals.

Through his untiring efforts he has helped to raise the standards of both student publications, and to achieve for them the highest possible ratings; his guidance and cooperative attitude have been invaluable in the publication of this and previous annuals.

When Shall We Three Meet Again?

Above we see Miss Ethel M. Gildersleeve, dean of girls, Mr. S. D. Green, assistant principal, Mr. Lamar R. Stanley, principal, at one of their frequent conferences.

We don't know what this one was about, but we bet that:

(1) Somebody is "on the carpet", or

(2) They're talking about going to the World's Fair, or

(3) Maybe the photographer has just said: "Watch the birdie!"

Class Song

We are leaving thee dear old Newport,
It is time to say good-bye;
With regrets we leave our Alma-Mater,
Though we knew the parting time was near;
But we look ahead into the future,
With our dreams of fortunes yet untold;
And within our hearts, dear Newport,
Thy memory shall be forever gold!

—By CAROLYN ROUSE

A dense collage of black and white photographs from the 1940s, featuring students in various settings: formal portraits, group shots, and candid moments. A handwritten note reads "Lots of Luck. You'll need it!" and a sign says "P.W.A. HERE ENJOY TRIP ON BUS". The collage includes photos of students in formal attire, casual wear, and group shots, as well as a photo of a student on a horse and a photo of a student in a military-style uniform.

We Never Graduate

A person's education never ends. The years of school equip the mind and the character to meet experience. Out of experience, out of the events that transpire from day to day, comes that broadening and seasoning influence that makes for knowledge in fact of life and its problems.

The daily newspaper mirrors life as it is. There is no greater instrument of knowledge than it for in it all of history, all of accomplishment, the increments and the sum of all knowledge is written as it transpires. In it is the key and the access to that broader learning that makes for education in all of its completeness, and on the historic and progressive Virginia Peninsula the DAILY PRESS and the TIMES-HERALD provide that key and that access.
